A New Approach to the Middle East

A discussion with former Secretary of State Madeleine K. Albright & former National Security Advisor Stephen J. Hadley

Moderated by Jon Sawyer, Executive Director of the Pulitzer Center on Crisis Reporting

Secretary Albright and Stephen Hadley were co-chairs of the Atlantic Council’s Middle East Strategy Task Force (housed within the Rafik Hariri Center), a two-year initiative aimed at forging new policy solutions that harness the resources and human capital of the Middle East region itself as a solution to state failure, civil wars, and extremist violence.

Albright served as secretary of state and ambassador to the United Nations under President William J. Clinton. Hadley served as national security advisor under President George W. Bush.

Albright and Hadley are speaking at a diverse set of educational institutions affiliated with the Pulitzer Center, a nonprofit journalism organization that has sponsored dozens of reporting projects on the Middle East.

While in St. Louis Albright and Hadley will also be speaking with high school students at Nerinx Hall High School in Webster Groves.

February 8th in GRAHAM CHAPEL, Washington University in St. Louis
Discussion runs from 9:00-10:30am. Doors open at 8:30am
